To say this last year has been a challenge is an understatement. Our world has faced a deadly pandemic, our nation has faced new levels of unrest, and our community faced months of painful social distance. Yet, we are making it through. The theme for this issue of our magazine is Groundbreaking, because our community of students and families, alumni, faculty and staff, have not only learned to rise up in a virtual world, but we have risen to the challenge of the pandemic, and in spite of everything, risen to the most ambitious capital campaign we have ever launched, to break ground for the new O’Dowd Center.

In this issue, you will read how our students and alumni have taken action to serve those most vulnerable during this pandemic. We are proud to say that our alumni have been engaged in producing and distributing the new vaccines, which are creating so much hope for our nation, as well as providing direct care for the individuals and families who have been most affected by COVID-19. And our students have shown tremendous commitment to our East Bay community, supporting healthcare workers, addressing food insecurity, and remaining engaged in public education and civic engagement efforts. You can read more on page 6.

Our students and faculty have also managed to thrive in the virtual world, finding resilience and joy even through distance. Our academic, athletic and co-curricular programs all broke creative ground this year, capitalizing on Zoom to learn from Yale professors and elected officials, compete across the country and internationally for mock trial and debate, and lead fellow students for ecological justice. Our campus ministry team created powerful and soul-restoring virtual worship services, our arts departments previewed our first ever YouTube performances, and the list goes on. Go to page 12 to read all the ways our community rose together, despite being remote, to maintain our commitments to academic excellence, community in diversity, and joy!

Finally, in March we broke ground on a long anticipated project: the O’Dowd Center. The Cor Unum Campaign reflected years of dedication from our former President Steve Phelps, and our entire community worked tirelessly to bring it to life. Breaking ground for this Center is a watershed moment for our school, and we could not have achieved it without you, our dedicated alumni, families and friends, and without the generosity of the Wayne and Gladys Valley Foundation. Please read about this historic accomplishment, and the innovative features of the new Center, on page 18.

Now, a new day is coming. The CDC reports that the US is administering over 2 million vaccinations a day. COVID-19 cases are dropping. And we were able to reopen our campus in March for hybrid learning, with the aim to be fully in-person this fall. I have no doubt that whatever the summer brings, our Dragon community will stay strong and triumph together.

With hope,
In February, O’Dowd launched our We ♥ O’Dowd Giving Challenge. Kicking off in celebration of Founder’s Day, and ending on Valentine’s Day, the challenge was an opportunity for students, parents, faculty and staff, former parents and alumni, grandparents, Board members and friends to join together and show just how much We ♥ O’Dowd. Every dollar we raised went to the Cor Unum Campaign for the O’Dowd Center.

In response to the challenge, our community kicked into full force. We received gifts of $5 and we received gifts of $12,000. Every single gift symbolized the ♥ our families have for O’Dowd.

“There is a lifetime sense of community at O’Dowd,” said Tovah Skiles ’96. “I’m excited for how students will benefit from the new Center.”

“As I look back, I loved everything about O’Dowd,” remembers Andy Rogers ’85, one of over 170 alumni who gave during the We ♥ O’Dowd Challenge. “I believe the friendships that students build in the new Center will support them throughout life.”

Thank you alumni, current parents, past parents, grandparents, faculty, coaches, staff, Board members, friends, and students! Together, with individual contributions, special alumni matches, and the amazing dollar-for-dollar matching grant from the Wayne and Gladys Valley Foundation, the We ♥ O’Dowd Giving Challenge saw more than 260 donors raise over $315,000 for the O’Dowd Center! This state-of-the art facility will sit at the heart of our campus, and sustain students, families, and alumni with Mass, rallies and celebrations, performances and sports, for generations to come. ♥

“The match meant a lot to me,” says Brian Cushing ’84, history teacher at O’Dowd. Three generations of Brian’s family graduated from O’Dowd. “I tried to make my contribution as big as possible because I want to make sure the campus is as vibrant when I leave as when I entered.”

“I gave to the We ♥ O’Dowd Challenge because I’m a member of the orchestra,” says Noelia McKillop ’21. “The new Center will be a space for more students to enjoy the arts and express themselves in different ways.”
DRAGONS ON THE FRONTLINES OF THE PANDEMIC

As the number of COVID-19 deaths in the United States surpasses 500,000 people, and the global death toll stretches past 3 million, the O’Dowd community has worked on the frontlines to respond to East Bay families who are struggling. Student efforts have ranged from addressing food insecurity and providing community education, to supporting healthcare workers. And professionally, our alumni are engaged in producing the vaccine and leading mass vaccination sites, guiding important research efforts, and serving vulnerable populations.

Dragon strength of character has kept our spirits high through these heavy times, and given our students and alumni the power to find solutions and serve with joy. And with the vaccine rolling out across the country, we look forward to brighter days ahead!

Krista Lucchesi, the Director of the Mercy Brown Bag program for the last 10 years, is parent of Amalie Sorenson ’22.

STUDENTS BREAK GROUND TO SERVE IN NEW WAYS

One of the consequences of the COVID-19 pandemic is rising food scarcity and hunger for individuals and families across the United States.

Starting in March of last year, at the beginning of the pandemic, 14 O’Dowd students began volunteering weekly for Mercy Brown Bag, a 34-year old program that provides bags of fresh produce, healthy grains, canned goods, and lean protein to over 5,000 low-income Alameda County seniors every month. Together they cheerfully bagged and delivered groceries, contributing hundreds of service hours, and stepping into the breach for seniors who had to stay home to protect their health.

VOTING SAFELY IN A PANDEMIC

2020 had the highest voter turnout in over a century, with almost every state hitting new records according to The Washington Post. But voting in the midst of COVID-19 carried new risks. And even though few O’Dowd students were eligible to vote, that didn’t stop Dragons from donning full personal protective equipment (PPE) and showing up to serve as poll workers, ensuring that everyone could cast their vote. Special thanks to Cameron Brown ’22, Lucas Fine ’21, Aaron Johnson ’21, Oliver Lucas ’22, Alejandra Mart ’22, and Cordelia Rauch ’22 for their outstanding civic commitment!

In addition, O’Dowd’s Solidarity in Action leaders wrote letters to unlikely-to-vote citizens and made a Voter’s Guide to help ensure that the pandemic didn’t keep anyone from participating in the election.
Supporting the Vulnerable, Serving the Frontline, Comforting Those in Quarantine

The pandemic has been especially hard hitting for low-income communities, healthcare workers, and senior populations. Dragons have responded to each in turn.

Sariyah Shabazz ’21 and Liana Parrish ’21 joined a team of students, in partnership with Oakland Frontline Healers and the City of Oakland, to address issues of housing insecurity, economic insecurity, and more. Together Sariyah and Liana helped lead multiple virtual town halls for young people, offering COVID-19 education and support.

When Grace Navarro ’22 learned from her aunt, a nurse at UCSF Benioff Children’s Hospital in Oakland, that essential healthcare workers were skipping meals because they had no time to eat, she stepped up to make them quick, easy snack bars, offering nourishment for not just their bodies, but their spirits too.

Sophia Dilworth ’22, concerned about the many senior citizens living in retirement homes around the Bay Area, deprived of family contact because of the pandemic, painted and hand wrote over 300 cards to help isolated elderly people feel seen and loved.

And at the very beginning of the pandemic, Charlotte Chin ’21 joined It Takes A Village, a group of over 250 volunteers making personal protective equipment (PPE) for healthcare workers and medically underserved communities. Charlotte not only sewed masks, but she also made instructional videos for non-English speaking volunteers and visual learners. Her highly effective videos helped the organization recruit still more volunteers, and they have now created and donated over 98,000 pieces of PPE.
PRODUCING AND DISTRIBUTING THE VACCINE

The Center for Disease Control reports that the vaccine is the best way to stop the pandemic and return to normal life. And we have Dragons at the forefront of the effort.

Jack Schilling ’03, whose passion for science was sparked by Mr. Newman’s biology class at O’Dowd, is the Director of US External Manufacturing for Moderna, one of three major vaccines now being distributed internationally. He leads a team to source critical raw materials for the vaccine, as well as its production, down to ensuring the doses make it into vials. “It’s inspiring to help solve a global problem,” Jack says. “As a chemical engineer, this is the greatest puzzle I’ve ever worked on.”

The Oakland Coliseum is one of a number of mass vaccination supersites that have launched in California. It aims to administer 6,000 doses per day. O’Dowd alumni David Rinetti ’82 and D’Lonra Ellis ’98 both work for the Oakland A’s, and participated in planning conversations with the City of Oakland, Alameda County, and the Governor’s Office to offer the grounds for vaccine distribution.

“The federal government was looking for sites that could service high populations of underrepresented and low-income people,” reports D’Lonra, who is both a VP and General Counsel for the A’s. “We knew we could be a great resource,” she continues. “David knows the facility better than anyone. He knew that our parking lots were capable of getting 6,000 cars in and out, so he was very instrumental in the logistics. And community service was instilled in us at O’Dowd.”

David is the VP of Stadium Relations for the A’s. “I look forward to the 2021 season,” he says. “Our hope is that we will have fans at some point attend the games.”

Oakland’s Fire Department is also critical for the vaccine rollout. “Our members have been trained to give vaccine shots,” reports alum Damon Covington ’91, who was recently promoted to Battalion Chief. “We’re working 12-hour shifts at the Oakland Coliseum, as well as two other vaccination sites — La Clinica in Fruitvale and another location in Dublin.” Damon says that as a firefighter his job is to comfort people in their times of greatest need. “Joining the Campus Ministry Team at O’Dowd opened my eyes to how great it feels to be of service to others,” he says. “It shaped me into the man I am today.”

Austin Beck ’98 is an Oakland firefighter at the downtown station on 27th and Broadway. “I love serving the community where I grew up, went to school, and where all my friends and family are,” he says.

AT THE CUTTING EDGE: LEADING RESEARCH

Since the pandemic began, there have been over 115,000 scientific articles published about COVID-19. It’s been more than most doctors can keep up with. William Du ’13, who got excited about science in his O’Dowd AP Biology class and ultimately graduated from Stanford with a Masters in Biomedical Informatics, serves as a technical leader and data scientist with Primer AI, a machine intelligence company that’s developed technology to rapidly process articles and identify key data. “For doctors who only have 30 minutes before rounds, the tool we developed keeps them up to date with the latest advancements so they can apply it in their attending work,” William describes. The COVID-19 dashboard his company has created is completely free. “Our mission is to do whatever we can to help with the pandemic,” he says. “We give back by taking our technology and turning it around to help.”

Also in the research field is Tara Viviani ’14, who works for a DC-based firm that partners with hospital leaders to address key challenges with data-driven solutions. “Over the last year, I co-led our research on the impacts of COVID-19 on women’s health and maternal health inequities,” Tara reports. The pandemic has been shown to more negatively impact women, who face increased difficulty receiving necessary reproductive care, have been at increased risk for domestic violence, and have long experienced racial and socioeconomic disparities in maternal health. “Through a series of blogs and a national webinar presented to 200 healthcare leaders, we presented key strategies that hospitals can use to address these challenges and reduce maternal health disparities in their communities,” Tara says.

CARING FOR COVID-19 PATIENTS AND THE BROADER COMMUNITY

“I began working in the COVID unit at the beginning of California’s second surge,” says alumna Marielle Belick ‘08, who is a nurse at Eden Medical Center. “The patients I see are those especially vulnerable to the virus — the elderly, minorities, the unhoused, and uninsured,” she shares. Every day, Marielle shows up to serve. “The pandemic has heightened the human side of my work,” she reports. “And my time at O’Dowd certainly shaped my approach to nursing, instilling the values of kinship, quality, and community.”

Daniela Johnson Rivas ’09 has also been at the frontlines of the pandemic. She owns Bay Harbor Care Home, a senior nursing facility in Alameda. When the virus started to spread last March, she sprang into action to keep her patients safe, shutting down to outside visitors two weeks before the state mandate. The New York Times has reported that one-third of US COVID-19 cases are linked to nursing homes. Daniela has avoided that. “We are blessed with no cases,” she says.

“Taking care of the elderly during a pandemic is very scary and protecting them is my number one priority,” she states. Despite the challenges, she remains committed to her mission. “When I was at O’Dowd, I volunteered at St. Anthony’s in San Francisco and spent many afternoons playing board games with elderly homeless people,” she remembers. “O’Dowd taught me compassion, and gave me the leadership skills to own the business.”

Our alumni have also been leaders contributing to both public health and community engagement. Dr. Jaseon Outlaw ’96 has focused a great deal of his practice on delivering mental health services during the pandemic. “Rates of depression and anxiety, substance abuse, and family and relationship conflicts have risen,” he reports. “I speak publicly about self-care, and support people to find ways to maintain the activities they love, even if those activities don’t look the way they used to.” Dr. Outlaw has spoken about mental health to a number of organizations, including the Diocese of Oakland, where he contributed to a panel titled, “Building Resilience in Children During the Pandemic.”

Another critical element of public health is the social infrastructure. “Issues of housing, homelessness, education and environmental justice have all been exacerbated by the pandemic,” declares Sal Beeby ’17. For the last year, he interned in Mayor Libby Shaaf’s office, leading community engagement events with organizations, activists, and faith leaders that helped to strengthen city relief efforts for those affected by the pandemic, and gave valuable information to vulnerable populations. “Despite the challenges of this year,” Sal says, “it gave me hope to see that throughout Oakland, there are passionate, determined, caring people who work every day to make their community a better place.”

We will end the pandemic if everyone gets the vaccine when it’s their turn,” says Mayor Shaaf.

As our Dragon community has faced months of remote academics, our students, faculty and staff have discovered ways to foster resilience and thrive. We’ve launched new programs and innovated our existing community traditions, breaking creative ground in the midst of the pandemic to maintain our charism commitments to academic excellence, community in diversity, kinship with creation, and joy!

LEARNING ACROSS DISTANCE

The pandemic has created some unique learning opportunities that might not have existed without our new reliance on Zoom. For example, seniors taking Identity, Literature and Writing participated in a lecture sponsored by UC Davis, engaging Yale professor Claudia Rankine, MacArthur-winning poet, playwright and multimedia artist, on her most recent book, Just Us: An American Conversation.

O’Dowd’s Ignite Club didn’t allow the pandemic to stop them from working to become the next generation of young female political leaders. Students held a virtual meeting with Berkeley City Councilwoman Lori Drost to learn first-hand about local government and came away inspired about the possibilities to address problems on a community level. “I hope to pursue a career in local government one day,” reported club member Radha Feist ’23. “I believe that I can make positive changes for my community.”

Instead of traveling to Chicago for the Empire Invitational, our Mock Trial team competed virtually, arguing cases against teams from around the world, including Hong Kong, the UK, Ireland, Australia, and South Korea. The competition was scored by sitting judges and practicing attorneys, and though we ultimately didn’t win, the Dragons remained undeterred and ready to launch more legal battles.
The debate team also adapted readily to the pandemic circumstances. They competed at the National Parliamentary Debate League Invitational, debating in a pool of 89 students from the top Parliamentary Debate schools in the nation. Our teams of Lucy Barretto ’21/Amy Jayasuriya ’22 and Paulina Harding ’21/Gratia O’Rafferty ’21 shut the tournament down early, claiming the rare accomplishment of tournament double champions!

And our students presented at the annual Ignatian Family Teach-In for Justice — O’Dowd’s sixth year of participation. The theme was Prophetic Resilience, and Sofia Gonzalez ’21, Chisomaga Nlemigbo ’21 and Joe Sweeney ’20 led a session called “Listening, Learning, Creating Change: Student Stories of Ecological Justice,” inspiring students across the country to enact change on their own school campuses and in their communities.

O’Dowd even launched a new sports program in the pandemic. Advanced Athletics: Performance Skills for the Complete Dragon is an initiative to strengthen our coaches and student-athletes with the values and skills gained through competition. This fall, Advanced Athletics held bi-weekly workshops, focused on topics of leadership, faith, identity and character.

NURTURING OUR FAITH, AND OUR COMMUNITY, WHILE APART

Our Campus Ministry Team rose to the challenge of virtual Mass and liturgies, guiding our community through beautiful and inspiring services, including our Mass of the Holy Spirit, “Finding Your Wings” Mass for seniors and their families, an Interfaith Thanksgiving liturgy, an Advent-Christmas liturgy, and Ash Wednesday liturgy, all from a distance. With each service, they restored our spirits and reminded us that we are one body, one community, in Christ. We will get through this storm, to the rainbow on the other side!

We continued to foster connections between students and families, holding onto our community traditions even while we had to hold them remotely. Almost 100 student leaders and faculty met before the start of the school year for the Advanced Leaders Retreat, and we led retreats throughout the fall and spring for the ninth and tenth grade classes, supporting them to continue making friends and nurture their strengths.

What’s your superpower?! In the tenth grade retreat, bestselling graphic novelist Gene Yang and art teacher Thien Pham led students to draw masks revealing their superpowers.

As soon as we could bring students on campus, Dragons were back in action on the field, in the Living Lab, leading clubs, and working for environmental justice.

Seniors got through their college applications and we made them smile (under their masks)!

“I’d never witnessed a sunrise before,” said Teralynn Nelson '21. “Being surrounded by a few of my close friends made it all the better.”

We put on incredible drama and orchestra performances via YouTube!

“We Were There: A Crisis Reflected” featured student-produced monologues, scenes, songs, dance, and film responding to both living through a global pandemic, and the heightened social, political, and cultural crisis to address institutionalized racism in our country.

The show must go on! Our extra talented students figured out how to make music, together/apart, for the annual Winter Concert.

Athletic Strength and Conditioning! Dragons finally got a breath of fresh air and a workout — together! — on the field.

O'Dowd’s hearty adventurers, led by president Ryan Okada '21, hiked a four-mile loop at Sibley Volcanic Regional Preserve, climbing over 690 feet in elevation.

Surf Appreciation Club organized clean-ups in Pacifica and Stinson Beach — a pod of students and families joined together to pick up trash and to learn more about local surf options.

Protecting our environment! O'Dowd’s Sustainability Department and student Eco Leaders collected PILES of E-Waste to donate to Tri-Valley Recycling, helping to keep tons of harmful chemicals out of our environment.

Keeping hope alive in challenging times! Our Living Lab grew or potted well over 3,000 plants for OUSD families, City Slicker Farms, and community gardens!
ONE HEART
O’DOWD COMMUNITY CREATES ART TO INSPIRE HOPE

The Sacred Heart is a traditional Catholic image, used for centuries to represent the heart of Christ. This year, the O’Dowd community interpreted and imagined that heart in new ways.

Last summer, O’Dowd’s annual Emerging Leaders Retreat was virtual for the first time. As a result, plans for student leaders to make a legacy artwork for their fellow classmates got scuffled.

“A few members of our staff worked together to get a piece of art started, instead,” says Marguerite Green, who has served O’Dowd for 18 years. She is our Assistant Director of Student Activities, mother to Antoniya ’00 and David ’03, and spouse of long-time O’Dowd history teacher, Tony Green. “We talked about the different feelings we were experiencing as individuals and as a community and an image developed.”

“We were responding to the challenging moment we found ourselves in last summer,” shares Mark Lederer, O’Dowd’s Director of Health and Wellness who has been at O’Dowd for nearly two decades. “We wanted to create something to inspire our emerging leaders.”

What materialized was a prototype of a heart wrapped in thorns, blazing with fire, with roots spreading into the earth below, and a cross at the heart’s crown.

Javier Sanchez, who has taught art at O’Dowd for 27 years and is known affectionately on campus simply as Jav, designed the prototype. Over the fall, he worked with Gary “Mace” Mason, O’Dowd’s Dean of Students, to translate that prototype into a mosaic, measuring four feet by eight feet, made from colored glass and iridescent black tiles.

Student leaders from the Associated Student Body, Campus Ministry Team, Solidarity in Action, Peer Tutors, Eco Leaders, Health and Wellness, and Dragon Ambassadors contributed to the mosaic by reflecting on each of O’Dowd’s charisms. Their words were etched in glass surrounding each of our school commitments.

Top: Javier Sanchez and Gary Mason.
“There is a meaning to mosaic, which I think is beautiful,” says Mark. “Mosaic is a physical representation of our community. And that’s the virtue of this piece. Each person who looks at it can have their own interpretation.”

Starr Gray ’98, Director of Student Activities at O’Dowd for 14 years, thinks so, too. “The Catholic faith is multilayered. For me, the flames of the heart represent the passionate ways our country was protesting this summer and fall. It tells me that a fierce love will bring us together.”

Michael Downs, O’Dowd’s Director of Justice and Kinship, adds, “The Sacred Heart is a traditional Catholic image, but it’s something our diverse community, from many different backgrounds, can reflect on together. A broken heart is an open heart. It’s a wound where grace comes through. Our hearts have been broken by the pandemic, by racial injustice, by economic hardship, by the wildfires. This image is piercing. It’s vulnerable. But it opens us up.”

“For me, the heart is about our students, who are the center of our community,” says Marguerite, “and the thorns represent the challenges they go through. But the roots show the strength and depth of our faith, and our connection to Oakland.”

As our school community concludes our Cor Unum Campaign for the O’Dowd Center, this sacred heart brings special relevance. Cor Unum, drawn from our school’s motto, means One Heart. “The heart appears thousands of times in the Bible,” Michael shares. “The heart is where we find our soul force, our conscience. This artwork will be displayed on campus, speaking to our students daily, empowering them to be agents of hope and healing and justice.”
BREAKING GROUND
THE NEW O’DOWD CENTER TAKES SHAPE

After an ambitious three-year campaign, O’Dowd broke ground last month for our new, state-of-the-art, 34,000 square foot Center, marking a major milestone for our future students and the history of our school.

We began the Cor Unum Campaign in 2018, when our visionary former President, Dr. Stephen Phelps, secured a generous matching grant of $20 million dollars from the Wayne and Gladys Valley Foundation. Our community, including current and former families, alumni, faculty and staff, students, and friends of the school, open-heartedly pulled together to reach our goal. And together, fully leveraging the matching grant, we raised $40 million dollars to build the O’Dowd Center. That we succeeded, through the sad passing of Dr. Phelps, and the outbreak of a global pandemic, is a testament to the power of our community.

This was a pioneering campaign for O’Dowd. Not only did the school receive the single largest grant in our history, but the O’Dowd Center is also the largest project and the largest campaign goal, by far, that the school has ever undertaken. And the campaign inspired unprecedented giving. More than 1,000 individuals and families contributed, including many alumni who gave for the first time ever. The campaign also inspired the largest individual donations the school has ever received, with gifts of $1 million and more — one from an alumna, one from a current family, and one from the parents of alumni. In the end, we raised more for the O’Dowd Center than we have for any prior campaign, making it our most successful fundraising effort to date. Through the Cor Unum Campaign, our community expressed how much we believe in keeping O’Dowd strong and competitive for generations to come.

“The Cor Unum Campaign was my first giving experience,” says Christine Keener ’07, Director of Government and Community Affairs at Verizon. “There are very few places that you can say changed your life,” she reflects. “But my life changed when I went to O’Dowd. I wanted to say thanks by empowering students that come after me with the access and opportunities that helped me grow.”

“The Center will make our school cutting-edge and modern,” declares Kevin Kelly, O’Dowd’s current Board Chair and parent to Cormac ’16, Maeve ’18, and Fiona ’21. “O’Dowd is literally a shining city on the hill, serving a wide and diverse community across the East Bay. When our institution grows and thrives, it means our students and future leaders grow and thrive.”
The O’Dowd Center has been designed to reinforce the heart of the O’Dowd experience, creating vibrant, beautiful spaces for drama, music, sports, teaching, and community gatherings. The building itself is LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) Certified Silver, which ensures that it is healthy, highly efficient, and green. And the interior will be contemporary and elegant, a setting that paves the way for O’Dowd students to explore their unique talents and gifts — as leaders, performers, athletes, musicians, and more.

“O’Dowd’s academics, athletics, and co-curriculars exemplify excellence,” says Elizabeth Kramer ’03, who played basketball, volleyball, and lacrosse while a student. “These programs deserve a brick and mortar building that reflects the soul of the school. This Center will bring O’Dowd into the future.”

Many families are excitedly anticipating the new gymnasium, featuring an NBA regulation size court named in honor of Dr. Phelps’ legacy — The Steve Phelps Memorial Court — which nearly doubles the size of the gym, and triples seating capacity. In addition, the gymnasium will have an advanced digital scoreboard, a controlled daylight system, and a gorgeous stained glass backdrop, making it a spectacular setting for games and community events, including Mass, rallies, and more.

“I’m looking forward to coming to every O’Dowd basketball game for the rest of my life,” says Brenna Roberson, mother of Marsalis ’21. Her daughter Anyah is entering O’Dowd’s Class of 2025. “Our players work hard,” she observes. “They give their best as athletes and scholars, and they deserve a best-in-class facility.”
The gymnasium will also serve as a central gathering place for students, parents and alumni, for much-loved traditions, from Mass and liturgies, to the Annual Crab Feed. “The Center will create opportunities to connect with other parents, meet new people, and share experiences,” envisions Peter Monroe ’83, father of Jacob ’23. He anticipates his younger son, Noah, now in the seventh grade, attending O’Dowd and enjoying community activities at the new Center. “Gathering together on-campus, building relationships between families, keeps our community strong.”
THE FUTURE OF PERFORMANCE

The new Center will boast professionally designed rehearsal and performance studios for our drama and music programs. Band students will have ensemble-sized practice and recording spaces, new instrument storage lockers, and a vast, sheet music library, while the expansive studio and high ceilings will magnify the acoustics.

“Through our music program, students develop their gifts and talents — social, musical, and academic,” says Fred Randolph, Director of Instrumental Music.

“The O’Dowd Center will strengthen those shared experiences and support students to create musical excellence!”

And the next chapter in O’Dowd’s commitment to the arts is the sophisticated drama studio, which includes space for dance, ensemble performance, and rehearsal, with a versatile black box theatre that replicates the main stage and will serve for more intimate and immersive shows, where the audience is surrounded by the world of the production.

“Over 200 students participate annually in drama.”

“The new drama studio will enable us to tell more ambitious, multidimensional stories,” says Trina Oliver, known as “Mizz O” by students, who has been teaching theatre arts at O’Dowd for 20 years. “What we teach in theatre are important skills for life,” she asserts. “Students learn drive, discipline, determination, collaboration, confidence, problem-solving and public speaking. It prepares them for whatever path they choose.”

“The new drama studio will enable us to tell more ambitious, multidimensional stories,” says Trina Oliver, known as “Mizz O” by students, who has been teaching theatre arts at O’Dowd for 20 years. “What we teach in theatre are important skills for life,” she asserts. “Students learn drive, discipline, determination, collaboration, confidence, problem-solving and public speaking. It prepares them for whatever path they choose.”

Over 200 students participate annually in drama.
The new O’Dowd Center would not be possible without the landmark matching grant from the Wayne and Gladys Valley Foundation, and the tremendous generosity of the Dragon community. Together, we demonstrated how deeply we believe in the future of O’Dowd, and in the future of Catholic education in the East Bay. Every gift we received was a symbol of the enormous love this community feels for our school. And now, breaking ground for the Center, we are translating that love into a building at the heart of O’Dowd where we will continue to gather for generations to come. Ultimately, the new Center is much more than brick and mortar — it is the promise and potential of every O’Dowd student, whose personal and professional journeys will be forever shaped by their experience at O’Dowd.

“Our family was inspired by the words of Mother Theresa,” says Katie Cronin ’80, Vice-Principal at St. Felicitas Catholic School in San Leandro. “She taught us that ‘We can do small things with great love.’” Katie met her husband Kelly Cronin ’80 at the O’Dowd flagpole. Their children, Connor ’09 and Emma ’13, both graduated from O’Dowd. “We supported the new Center because we feel a moral obligation to give back to the community that gave us so much. And we know that the connections and relationships at O’Dowd last a lifetime.”

Construction is now underway, and the new O’Dowd Center will open in the Fall of 2022.
This year, for the first time ever, we hosted our annual Transforming Lives Dinner VIRTUALLY. While we couldn’t be together in person, over 300 members of our community gathered — family, friends, faculty, and alumni — and we were blown away by how strongly we could still feel the Dragon pride!

Emily Quinn ’95 was an incredible host. She inspired our community to stretch generously and invest in the future of O’Dowd through tuition assistance. “We are supporting students with opportunities to join this community, which we love and cherish,” she cheered. “This is a huge YES YOU CAN moment!”

We were also tremendously honored to have as our guest speaker judicial professor Kimberly Papillon ’87, a parent of three O’Dowd graduates, a founding member of O’Dowd’s Black Student Union, and a nationally recognized expert in the neuroscience of decision-making. “Your gifts are an opportunity to change patterns, to alter the trajectory of someone’s life,” she reminded us.

Together, our community raised over $330,000 in support of tuition assistance. These funds create pathways for students, like Selma Louise Apara ’22, to thrive. “I’ve made connections at O’Dowd that I’ll carry through the rest of my life,” she said. Selma loves to perform. She’s participated in school plays, BSU and multicultural assemblies, joined the Cheer Team, and won Nationals. “If I hadn’t gotten financial aid, I wouldn’t have been able to have this great experience,” she declared.

We are beyond grateful for the power and generosity of our Dragon community. Thank you for continuing to make O’Dowd a place for all students to feel welcome, reach their potential, and leave our campus prepared to make the world a better place.

O’Dowd honors the lives of all those lost to COVID-19.

We grieve with the families who are suffering, and we pray for an end to the pandemic.

_Eternal rest
grant unto them,
O Lord,
and let perpetual light
shine upon them.
May their souls and the souls of all the faithful departed,
through the mercy of God,
rest in peace._

REMEMBERING GLEN HENTGES

With heavy heart we share that our former Board Chair and long-time O’Dowd advocate, father of Alex ’11 and Tyler ’15, Glen Hentges, passed peacefully at home in late January. Glen’s sharp mind, dedication, generosity, and kind heart infused his service to O’Dowd.

Glen’s board service from 2011 to 2017 was characterized by a deep sense of mission and wise counsel. After his board tenure, Glen and his wife Mary generously supported the Cor Unum Campaign and Glen served on its Finance Cabinet. Glen and his wife Mary also chaired the Transforming Lives Dinner in 2018 and the Hentges have been exceptionally generous in supporting tuition assistance through the years. Bishop O’Dowd High School has established an endowed fund to support tuition assistance in Glen’s memory.

Glen was a thoughtful man who loved his family, his parish, and his community. The O’Dowd community lifts our prayers for the restful repose of Glen’s soul in heaven, sending love and support to Mary, Alex, Tyler, and all who loved and cherished Glen.

“O’Dowd represents compassion and kindness. Whether through tuition assistance or the care shown to students and families, O’Dowd demonstrates its values. I’m especially grateful for the Performing Arts Department. Teachers Dennis Kohles ’69 and Trina Oliver shaped my children’s character with “The 5 D’s” — Desire, Discipline, Dedication, Determination and Drive. My children often say, ‘If not for O’Dowd, we wouldn’t be where we are now.’ That’s why I have O’Dowd in my will.”
